Adulteration of Spices. The chemists of the Department of Agriculture, under the direction of the commissioner, have for a year or more been investigating the extent and manner of food adulteration practiced in this country, and a report covering several branches of the work is in process of preparation. That portion relating to spices and condiments, prepared by Mr. Clifton Richardson, is already completed. Mr. Richardson's investigations show that no other kinds of human food are sandulterated to such an extent. Of twenty samples of ground cloves examined only two were pure. The others had suffered the extraction of their essential oils, and had been polluted by the addition of clove steme. allspice and husks of various kinds. Of eight samples of cayenne pepper, only one was pure. Of ten samples of mustard, none were pure, unchanged mustard, though several had only suffered the loss of their fixed oil; the others contained quantities of wheat flour, the spurious matter being in some cases, two-thirds of the compound. This made it necessary to add tumeric acid harmless) to restore the mustard color Ten samples of allspice were examined eight of which were pure. Four samples of cassia were all pure. Of ten samples of ginger, four were pure. Only one out of thirteen samples of black pepper was found to be what it purported to be. A specimen sent from Baltimore to a man who had an army contract was almost entirely spurious. Cayenne pepper, black pepper husks and mustard hulls were used to give flaver and pungency, while "body" was sup-plied by ground beans and rice, and color by charcoal. Two samples of white pepper out of five were pure, and of three samples of nutnegs examined all were pure. Mr. Richardson's experience leads to the conclusion that the public has the power in its own hands to effect a reform in the matter of spice adulteration. The quality of the article is usually fixed by the retailer, who names the price he is willing to pay. The grinder thereupon estimates the amount of the pure spice be can afford to put in, and fills out the order with refuse. Mr. Richardson incidentally mentions a New York spice grinder who within a short time worked off five thousand pounds of eccoanut husks.
